Be a mentor on a summer camp with Lauriston Lights

The following link where undergraduates can easily apply online to be mentors on our summer camps in 2016: <http://lauristonlights.com/get-involved.html>.

To briefly summarise, Lauriston Lights is a set of summer camps for gifted 11-year olds who are from disadvantaged backgrounds. Right now, this demographic receives very little special support from governmental schemes. Therefore, our summer camps aim to give focused attention to these children, which they might otherwise not receive. We try develop and refine the children's aspirations, communication, character and intellectual skills. We're now preparing for our fourth annual iteration in August 2016.

Lauriston Lights was founded by undergraduates, and we continue to be run solely by current or recent undergraduates. Students who've mentored with us in previous years invariably cite the experience as being eye-opening, worthwhile and fun. All of our mentors are volunteers, so we depend on universities and colleges to spread the word and help us encourage undergraduates to apply.
